Libyan airliner disaster ICAO CLEARS ISRAEL OF ALL BLAME

DAVID LENNON
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

Israel is completely cleared of blame in a 90-page report by the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) on the downing of a Boeing 747 airliner which crashed in the Sinai in February with 259 people on board.

The report, which is due to be published this week, reveals that the crash was due to a combination of factors, including a malfunctioning radar at Cairo airport, a failure of the aircraft's navigation system, and a lack of communication between the aircraft and ground control.

The report also states that the aircraft was not in a climb when it crashed, but was in a steep descent. This suggests that the pilot may have been confused or disoriented.

The ICAO report is the most comprehensive investigation of the disaster to date. It provides a detailed account of the events leading up to the crash, and offers recommendations to prevent similar accidents in the future.

provided in Libya before take off on the flight to Cairo was a day old. It referred to high altitude wind conditions over Libya but did not contain any reference to the unusually high winds in the Cairo area which in fact helped to put the plane off course.

The beacon at Cairo was not working properly when the Boeing and other aircraft tried to receive it. The Cairo approach control surveillance radar was unresponsive, and the investigators found that the radar was not working properly.

NO RADAR FIX

It was 17 or 18 minutes after the "major deviation" before the crew or ground control realized that the plane was off course. Realizing he was lost, the pilot requested a radar fix from Cairo. The fix was never received.

He asked again and though his message was acknowledged he was never given the fix. About this time a shift-change of the air traffic controllers at Cairo airport was taking place. When the Cairo controllers eventually cleared the airliner to descend for landing, believing it was 15 miles away, the Boeing was actually crossing the Gulf of Suez in good vertical visibility and entering Sinai, almost 100 miles away from Cairo airport.

They instructed the plane to descend to 4,000 feet when it was 105 miles away and only 15 miles from the Israeli Air Force base at Bir Gafgafa. Even when the pilot saw the airfield he was still in touch with Cairo and was so convinced that he was near there that he mistook the Israeli Phantom sent up to intercept him for Egyptian MiGs.

The report reveals that Israel picked up the plane by radar before it crossed the Gulf of Suez and became apprehensive because it was on a direct track for the important military air base at Bir Gafgafa.

The cockpit voice recorder and statements by three passengers occurred with the report by the leaders of the Israeli fighter team on the measures taken to make the plane land. The report confirms that the Phantoms complied with the correct procedure.

The leading pilot rocketed his Phantom's wings to indicate the Boeing must land on the airfield which was already in view. The Boeing pilot did not comply and was still talking to Cairo airport about landing there.

REPEATED SIGNALS

Flying to within 40 feet of the cockpit of the Libyan plane the Israeli repeatedly made hand signals pointing to the airfield below where the Boeing could have landed safely. However, the Boeing co-pilot, a Libyan, indicated that he intended to fly straight ahead. They then fired tracer bullets harmlessly in front of the plane. These were seen by both the Boeing pilots but as they gave no response the Israelis later fired at the airliner's starboard wing tip, to show they meant business, but doing no serious damage.

When the Libyan aircraft still failed to comply, they fired at its starboard wing-root and this forced the plane to descend but still under control. The report says that there was probably an explosion in the starboard wheel-well area as the plane touched down for a forced landing in the desert.

The official ICAO map of the Boeing's flight track does more than confirm the path claimed by Israel and so hotly disputed by critics. It shows that the plane was even further inside Sinai. The report also makes it clear that the allegations that Israel tampered with the tape-recording in the Boeing's black box found in the wreckage are unfounded.

Chapman Pincher of the "Daily Express," who first carried the report, wrote on Friday that the report reveals a "degree of inefficiency, sloppiness and irresponsibility unparalleled in the history of aviation both by the Egyptians at Cairo airport and by the crew of the Libyan Arab Airlines machine."

He also observes that many countries and organizations, including the ICAO itself, will have to do some swift diplomatic apologizing for originally putting complete responsibility for the disaster on Israel.

Greece is declared republic

ATHENS. — Exiled and deposed King Constantine of Greece pledged last night that he will fight to restore democracy in his country, which was declared a republic on Friday by Premier George Papadopoulos.

The 83-year-old monarch appealed to the Athens authorities to let the Greeks decide the fate of the monarchy, abolished on Friday by Papadopoulos.

In a declaration to newsmen at his villa in Rome, the ex-monarch denied any complicity in the Navy's recent abortive plot to oust the regime of Papadopoulos, who took over in a coup in April 1967.

The king added that if the Papadopoulos government forbids the Greek people a free choice, "I shall be compelled to regard myself as the sole possessor of legitimacy."

Thousands of people poured into Athens streets yesterday in a government-organized demonstration of support for the new Greek republic as reports swept through the city that many royalist sympathizers had been arrested.

Reliable sources said those arrested included former Interior Minister Christopher Stratos, a 49-year-old industrialist who was a staunch supporter of King Constantine. The former king has been living in Rome for the last five-and-a-half years.

The sources were unable to give a precise number of those arrested since Papadopoulos decried the king and proclaimed himself president of the new republic.

Papadopoulos pledged that Greeks would be called upon within 90 days to approve by referendum the changes in the constitution establishing a presidential parliamentary democracy. As soon as the Greek people had endorsed the change, the mechanism would be set into motion so that general elections for a parliament could be held before the end of 1974, he said.

About 10,000 Athenian workers, members of the government-controlled Greek General Confederation of Labour and Civil Servants, rallied in Omonia Square in downtown Athens, carrying banners and distributing leaflets which said, "President of the Republic, we are with you."

Mr. Eban said Israel is still prepared to accept the Tunisian President's suggestion of a meeting, made to Italian and French journalists during the past week. He was speaking on Israel Radio's Weekly Magazine programme. It would have been better had the suggestion been made through a channel other than the press, the Minister added. Nevertheless, if the chance for a meeting is offered, Israel is prepared to take it.

"We do not demand that he agree with our position — but it cannot be expected that we agree in advance to the position stated by an Arab leader," Mr. Eban said in reference to reports that Mr. Bourguiba insisted the proposed discussion would have to be based on the 1947 Partition Plan borders.

Ten thousand members of the Greek Confederation of Labour and civil servants gathered in Athens' main Omonia Square yesterday to shout their approval for the new Republic.

More African states said due to cut Israeli ties

ALGERS (Reuters). — More African states will soon decide to break relations with Israel, the Algerian Government newspaper "El-Moudjahid" has reported.

Commenting on the recent Organization of African Unity summit in Addis Ababa, the paper said on Friday that 14 African countries had no relations with Israel. "Their number will increase — and we have good reasons to believe that the decisions will be taken very soon," it added.

"El-Moudjahid" did not say which countries might follow the six African nations which have broken with Israel in recent months. It said Arab-African solidarity was "a major point for the future of our organization" and said it "should be expressed in a more pronounced way, like the solidarity the whole Arab world shows for Africa."

"El-Moudjahid" criticized "incomprehensible reticences" on the part of some African states "which, while siding for a militant position against Portuguese colonialism and the racist regimes of southern Africa, use doubtful arguments when it's a question of Israel."

Wouldn't accept unsupported evidence Paper says it also took Lambton pictures

LONDON (UPI). — The Sunday newspaper "The News of the World" says it took pictures of the former Minister, Lord Lambton, in compromising situations. Lambton resigned from the government on May 22 with a public confession that he had had relations with call girls. On Friday he resigned from Parliament.

In an editorial published in today's edition, the paper says: "Of course the 'News of the World' took pictures of Lord Lambton in compromising situations. 'Were we supposed to have accepted the unsupported evidence of pimps and prostitutes? But these pictures were never published, nor were they intended for publication. 'Of course the 'News of the World' made sure that the police were made aware of the progress of all its inquiries. Was that not its clear public duty?'

The newspaper said the pictures were taken to check otherwise unsupported evidence it had received about the Lambton affair.

"The 'News of the World' first had stories about Lord Lambton's activities confirmed from an unimpeachable source in March this year," it says.

Lambton's resignation was followed last week by that of Lord Jellicoe, another Government minister, who also confessed to relations with call girls.

Libyan radio, TV 'taken over' by people

TRIPOLI (Reuters). — Radio and television stations in Libya were yesterday taken over by committees of Colonel Muammar Gaddafi's Islamic "cultural revolution," the official Libyan news agency reported. The stations began broadcasting martial music during the day instead of their regular programmes.

The takeover followed a call to the nation by Gaddafi over Tripoli Radio urging Libyans to take over the radio stations. He said: "Seize all radio stations in Libya to impose your free will and project your voice to the world."

Afterwards, the people took over the installations and posted militia guards in the place of army sentries. (Reuters, UPI)

'Israel still explores chances of meeting with Bourguiba'

Israel continues to explore "through suitable channels" the possibility of holding a meeting with President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia, Foreign Minister Abba Eban said yesterday.

Mr. Eban said Israel is still prepared to accept the Tunisian President's suggestion of a meeting, made to Italian and French journalists during the past week. He was speaking on Israel Radio's Weekly Magazine programme. It would have been better had the suggestion been made through a channel other than the press, the Minister added. Nevertheless, if the chance for a meeting is offered, Israel is prepared to take it.

"We do not demand that he agree with our position — but it cannot be expected that we agree in advance to the position stated by an Arab leader," Mr. Eban said in reference to reports that Mr. Bourguiba insisted the proposed discussion would have to be based on the 1947 Partition Plan borders.

Considering U.S. move Cairo may be ready for negotiations

By ANAN SAFADI
Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter

The Egyptian-initiated Middle East debate in the U.N. Security Council has been postponed from tomorrow until Wednesday amid indications that Cairo is considering an American move calling for indirect negotiations between Israel and the Arabs.

The debate was put off for two days at the request of Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Hassan Zayyat shortly after his arrival in New York on Friday. A U.N. spokesman reported Zayyat as having asked the Security Council President, Jacob Malik of the Soviet Union, to postpone the debate to enable Egypt to have further consultations with various delegates. Egypt is apparently particularly interested in Saudi Arabia, Syria, Algeria, Nigeria, Tanzania and Chad, whose foreign ministers have been rallied by Cairo to attend the U.N. discussion of the Middle East crisis.

A Cairo editor known for close relations with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said yesterday that most of the Security Council members were likely to accept a U.S. proposal for indirect Israel-Arab negotiations, but under certain conditions. The editor, Ismail Abdul-Kuddous, of the weekly "Al-Ahbar el-Yom," said that the U.S. proposal would have to be coupled with an American pledge to put pressure on Israel to take part in such talks and Israel would have to submit a map showing "what land she has an eye on."

U.S. SUPPORT

Referring to the May 29 statement of the U.S. delegate to the Security Council, John Scali, on the need to start Middle East negotiations, whether direct or indirect, Abdul-Kuddous said that Egypt was undoubtedly interested in gaining American support at the Security Council debate "after failing to do so for the last six years."

Abdul-Kuddous's remarks seemed to be in conflict with those of other Egyptian commentators, especially on the state radio, who have criticized the U.S. call for Israel-Arab negotiations, and in particular the suggestion of proximity talks between Egypt and Israel over the Suez Canal.

Egypt's concerted diplomatic activity in connection with the Security Council debate appears to be easing the tension which has built up in the wake of Cairo's threats to renew hostilities this summer. Nevertheless, Cairo has not ceased its war preparations, which are being coordinated with other Arab states.

Following Arab warnings to Egypt over launching a "premature" war against Israel, Cairo apparently wants to exploit the current Middle East political activity to consolidate her military strength with the aid of other Arab states.

"Al-Ahbar el-Yom" said yesterday that President Sadat of Egypt and President Ja'far Numairi of Sudan have agreed on the return of Sudanese forces to the Suez Canal front. The paper said that the two presidents, who met in Addis Ababa at the Organization of African Unity conference last week, also agreed on the reopening of the Egyptian military academy in Khartoum.

Relations between the two countries were strained last year after Sudan's decision to resume diplomatic ties with the U.S. and its refusal to allow an airborne Libyan force to fly through Sudanese airspace to Uganda.

In Amman, the Secretary-General of the 18-nation Arab League, Mahmud Riad, warned over the weekend that unless the Arabs mobilized their energies they would lose more territory to Israel. Riad left the Jordanian capital after talks with King Hussein and his top aides.

ARAB AFFAIRS

Riad's visit to Amman was the last leg in a tour which earlier took him to Beirut and Damascus. He said that his talks in the three capitals dealt with all matters concerning the Arab world, including "the liberation of the occupied territories."

Riad said that "liberation" could not be achieved through the Security Council debate, "but by the mobilization of Arab strength."

Riad indicated that his mission to Jordan had been directed mainly at reconciling Amman and other Arab countries, especially Egypt and Syria, both of whom have been at odds with King Hussein over his tough stand towards the terrorists.

In a related development, Beirut's "Al-Hayat" yesterday said that Jordan's new Premier, Zaid Rifai, paid a secret visit to Damascus last Tuesday and met with Syrian President Hafez al-Assad.

Quoting reliable sources in Amman, the Lebanese newspaper said that Rifai's talks in Damascus were "held in a frank atmosphere." Recently, while still a political adviser to King Hussein, Rifai paid a secret visit to Cairo, where he conferred with Sadat.

Tekoah sees Waldheim

Jerusalem Post Diplomatic Correspondent

Israel's ambassador to the U.N., Yosef Tekoah, met with Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim on Friday for a final discussion before this week's debate. He reiterated to the Secretary-General Israel's basic positions:

- Israel would not be bound by changes in Resolution 242.
  - Israel opposed creation of any new U.N. machinery such as a new committee or a new embassy.
  - Israel would no longer cooperate with peace envoy Gunnar Jarring if the Security Council were to endorse his memorandum of February 1971.
- In that memorandum, which Israel rejected, Dr. Jarring called for an Israeli commitment to withdraw to the international frontier with Egypt (i.e. to evacuate all of Sinai save the Gaza Strip). Mr. Tekoah stressed that as far as Israel was concerned the sole binding basis of Dr. Jarring's mission was Resolution 242.

NAHARIYA. — Hundreds of West Galilee residents attended the opening of the national park at Achziv on Friday evening, following months of litigation between the authorities and Eilat Achziv — the self-styled "King" of Achziv.

The park includes much of the land formerly in Mr. Achziv's "domain." He had unsuccessfully fought the establishment of the park with a series of court injunctions. (Him.)

Brandt: Moral background to ties between Bonn, Israel

West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, due to begin an official visit to Israel on Thursday, told an Israel Television interviewer in Bonn the visit was a sign the two countries had "good, normal working relations with a specific historical and moral background."

In an interview broadcast on Friday night's weekly newsreel, Mr. Brandt said his talks with Israeli leaders would deal with Israel's relations with the Common Market and the Middle East crisis.

Mr. Brandt hinted that, if asked, he might use his good offices to restore diplomatic relations between Israel and the Soviet Union. The absence of such relations was not a good thing "and if anyone asks me to bring this opinion to the notice of others, I see no difficulties in making the attempt."

He recalled that he discussed the Middle East problem in recent weeks with both President Nixon in Washington and Soviet Communist Party leader Leonid Brezhnev, who visited Bonn last month. When the interviewer suggested he was currently the best informed man in the Western World on the Middle East situation, the Chancellor said he would not contradict that view.

Saying that Germany had its own interest "in contributing if we can, to a more stable peace in the Middle East," Mr. Brandt described his attitude to the conflict as balanced without being neutral.

In reply to a question, Mr. Brandt said he was not bearing any message to Israel from Arab leaders. But he would tell Mrs. Meir what the Arab leaders he had met had told him.

He said he hoped his talks in Israel "without illusions and exaggeration, in a reasonable way," would explore avenues of co-operation, and also the question of how to deal with the past. In this context Mr. Brandt suggested that Israeli and West German experts might even discuss how to treat the Nazi period in school textbooks.

Eban lauds Bonn's policy on Mid-East

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter
TEL AVIV. — Foreign Minister Abba Eban on Friday described West Germany's Middle East policy as being the closest to Israel after that of the U.S.

He was speaking to the Labour Party Foreign Affairs Committee which discussed relations between the Israel Labour Party and the West German Social Democratic Party on the eve of the visit here of Chancellor Willy Brandt and the departure to Germany of an official Israel Labour Party delegation at the invitation of the S.P.D.

Surveying German-Israeli political relations, the Foreign Minister noted Germany's political achievements in Egypt without having submitted to Egyptian blackmail which had a wider application. Praising Chancellor Brandt, Mr. Eban noted that the West German leader constantly refers to "the special relations" obtaining between his country and Israel. The Foreign Minister found a parallel between Mr. Brandt's Ostpolitik and the Middle East situation — in both cases the emphasis was on negotiations between the parties involved.

EBAN'S STATEMENT AT ECONOMIC PARLEY

Foreign Minister Abba Eban was inadvertently reported in Friday's Jerusalem Post as telling the Economic Conference that British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home had said that approved relations between Britain and Israel depended on Britain's balance of payments. In fact, Mr. Eban said that a former Labour Foreign Secretary had said this to him. (Him.)

Court bars strike at Tel Aviv University Technion staff meets today

The academic staffs of Tel Aviv University and Haifa's Technion will meet today and tomorrow to decide whether to go through with strike plans.

A temporary injunction barring the Tel Aviv staff from a planned work stoppage this morning was issued Friday at the University's request, by the Tel Aviv Regional Labour Court. The Tel Aviv staff, which held a one-day stoppage on Wednesday will meet at 11 a.m. this morning.

The Technion staff will meet tomorrow on its own plans to go on strike after the Shavuot holiday this week.

The staffs at both institutions want revisions in their work contracts. They are also backing their junior-staff colleagues, who have been striking for several weeks for higher pay.

Friday's injunction was issued with only the University administration side present. The court set a meeting with both sides for 4.30 this afternoon. Tel Aviv staff sources told The Post last night they did expect this morning's general meeting to go through with the strike since most of the professors do not want to violate a court order.

Classes at Tel Aviv will be held up to the 11 a.m. time set for the meeting, they said. There are usually few classes before that hour. Studies are likely to be suspended until at least early afternoon by the staff meeting.

The Tel Aviv lecturers are supporting the two-week-old strike of the University's 600 Assistants for higher pay and are pressing pay demands of their own. They agreed to have last fall's wage agreement officially registered claiming it was initiated not by each of their various official organizations but only by a joint committee. This, the academic staff argues, makes the agreement not binding upon them, and they now wish to negotiate alterations.

The Labour Ministry's Chief Labour-Relations Officer, Gideon Ben-Israel, has rejected this argument.

In Haifa, the Technion academic staff will meet tomorrow to decide whether to carry out their plans to strike after Shavuot in support of their junior colleagues and to press their own demand for a revision to their work contract. Faculty Association chairman Prof. Ariel Yehoshua last night expressed strong disapproval of what he called "the selective use of legal means" against the Tel Aviv professors. He noted that no attempt had been made to obtain injunctions against the Kupa Holim employees and other groups of workers, because the authorities "were aware the workers would simply ignore them. He said the professors would not contravene court orders, "but we shall find a sophisticated answer to what we consider discriminatory treatment."

Meanwhile, there is no change in last Wednesday's decision to hold the examination papers at the coordinating committee of university faculties. The strike by the Technion's junior staff of assistants and instructors, begun three weeks ago, continues.

The 900 assistants and instructors of the Hebrew University will be out on a one-day solidarity strike today, to support their colleagues at Haifa and Tel Aviv. (The 700-800 senior lecturers will not join.)

Lifeguards desert Tel Aviv beaches

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The Lifeguards of Tel Aviv-Jaffa are going on strike from today after rejection of their wage claims by the Tel Aviv municipal workers union.

It has now become almost a tradition for the Lifeguards to start the summer season with a strike for more pay. On Friday they hung up black flags — danger sign — over their stations along the beaches as a protest measure.

The municipality last night advised the public not to swim in the sea during the Lifeguards' strike. City inspectors will patrol the beaches.

The strike was launched after the union turned down the list of 16 demands of the men which came to a total increase of "many hundreds of per cent," finding them "going far beyond any reasonable framework for negotiation."

Three die on roads

Three pedestrians, one of them still unidentified, were killed in separate accidents Thursday and Friday.

The unidentified man, who had no papers on his person, was struck down by a commercial van as he was crossing the Sharon road near Midrasat Rupin on Friday evening.

Isidore Gross, aged 85, of Kiryat Tivon, was run over by a car on Friday evening as he was crossing the suburb's main road. The driver has been detained for questioning.

Habiba el-Sayag, 50, of Ramla, was killed on Thursday evening when she was struck by truck as she was crossing Rehov Ezer at a pedestrian crossing. The driver was held for questioning.

30 months for hit-and-run

A hit-and-run driver who hit and injured a girl in Jerusalem was sentenced to 30 months and had his licence revoked for three years by the Jerusalem District Court on Friday.

The man, Dan Mizrahi, 22, now serving in the army, was convicted of striking down a 10-year-old girl in Jerusalem's Kiryat Menachem quarter in 1971 and failing to stop. He pleaded guilty. (Him.)

Two children dead in accidents

A three-year-old boy, Mohammed Yunis, died yesterday in a fall from a two-metre-high wall at his home in Beit Ur, near Ramatallah. He died shortly after being admitted to the Government Hospital in Ramatallah.

At Hadassah Hospital on Friday, a 2½-year-old boy died from burns received when a baking oven toppled on him. The boy, Gavriel Ohana, of Mevaseret Yerushalayim, was left alone by his mother when she went out shopping. (Him.)

Body identified

TEL AVIV. — The woman whose body was found in a Ramat Gan cesspool last Thursday has been identified as Pessia Fakar, 75, of Be'er Brak, police said yesterday. It is believed that the woman, who was reported missing a week ago, fell into the pit after suffering a heart attack. (Him.)

Italian planes collide
ROME (Reuters). — Two Italian Air Force fighter planes collided here yesterday minutes after taking part in a fly-past marking Italy's national day.
One of the pilots was killed, the other bled out over the sea and was later picked up.

Countercharges over Safad strike

Jerusalem Post Reporter
SAFAD. — Mayor Eli Kadush and the Labour Council on Friday held separate press conferences to level charges at each other over the strike of the 350 municipal employees due to start this morning. The workers are demanding pay for 49 cleaning workers and 20 school kitchen employees equal to that given for similar jobs in Tiberias. They claim the mayor reneged on an agreement to do so while at the same time granting upgrading to his "favourites" on the city staff.

Mr. Kadush charged the strike was a political one, directed against his Gahal administration, and was the second since the Alignment left the coalition in December. Many of the workers would be getting less pay if the scales were equalized, he said.

Council Secretary A. Nehmias vehemently denied any political motive. He claimed the strike was a purely professional one. The Council had also complained to the Interior Ministry against the alleged favouritism in City Hall, he said.

Dissolve Hadera Council: Alignment

HADERA. — Members of the opposition Alignment faction in the Hadera City Council have demanded that the Interior Ministry dissolve the Council, headed by a Gahal-National Religious coalition, and appoint a commission to run the town.

The Alignment councillors told reporters at a news conference here Friday that the recent State Comptroller's report on Hadera had revealed a number of major failings. These included illegal building, lack of proper building inspection, and financial irregularities.

Reacting to the charges, a City Executive spokesman said that most of the irregularities mentioned in the Comptroller's report covered the period of 1965-1971, and "rectifications have already been made."

Netanya Labour

NETANYA. — Acting Mayor Avraham Bar-Menahem has been chosen by the local Labour Party branch to head the Alignment list in the coming municipal elections. The party branch council, meeting on Friday, also picked Labour council Secretary N. Shahaf to run for another term. (Him.)

Haim Halperin, farm expert, dies at 77

TEL AVIV. — Professor Haim Halperin, an outstanding figure in the development of Israel's agriculture, here yesterday, aged 77.
Prof. Halperin, who taught agricultural sciences at the Hebrew University and at Tel Aviv University, won the Israel Prize this year for his contributions to agriculture. He was ill when the prize was awarded last month. His wife Boba Ideelson, secretary-general of Moetz Hapoelet and a former Knesset Member, accepted the prize on his behalf.

Prof. Halperin was one of the heads of the Agricultural Centre, which he helped to found, and served as the first director-general of the Agriculture Ministry when the State was established. He founded the Agriculture Bank which he headed until recently. He edited the Agricultural Encyclopedia, wrote several books on agriculture, and conceived the "agritudus" system of combining agriculture with industry.

He immigrated here in 1924 from Russia, where he had been imprisoned for his Zionist activity. His only son, Aharon, fell in battle during the War of Independence.
Prof. Halperin's body will be placed at the Agricultural Centre lobby in Tel Aviv at 10 a.m. tomorrow, and the funeral will leave from there to the Kiryat Shaul cemetery at 11 a.m.

AFTER ARTICLES ON WAR'S EVE SURKISS SAYS 'OT' EDITOR SHOULD QUIT

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Deputy Labour Party secretary-general Mordechai Surkiss on Friday called for the resignation of David Shamam as editor of the party weekly. He made this demand at a meeting of the Labour party Leadership Bureau here in the wake of the sharp reprimand administered to Mr. Shamam by Labour party secretary-general Aharon Yadin. Mr. Surkiss represents the ex-Rafi constituent of Labour.

In a personal recollection of the waiting period before Six Day War, Mr. Shamam charged that Transport Minister Shimon Peres, then Rafi secretary-general, had deliberately misled supporters of the late Premier Eshkol on the gravity of the pre-war situation.

Another article in the same issue, by Moshe A. Glibos, charged the former Rafi leadership with "creating panic" during the waiting period. A third piece, a historical appraisal of the war, was written by former Tel Aviv University history lecturer Meir Pe'il, who since he left the army has been associated with Shai — the New Left.

Mr. Yadin, in his statement, said he regretted the manner in which the editor of "OT" dealt with the eve of war situation. "I strongly reject the attempt at a tendentious historical analysis hurting the party's standing and unity on the eve of election contests. I do so without touching on the actual historical facts on which I am no expert. Moreover, the editor himself wrote that he does not pretend to give a precise report six years later. I appeal once more to all party members, and especially to the editor of the party weekly, to desist from these wars of attrition and avoid leveling internal party battles. I never intended to be the censor of the editor of the 'OT' editorial board, but in elementary fairness the editor should have contacted the Minister serving on our party's behalf and shown him a copy of the material beforehand in order to check the facts." (Sources close to Mr. Peres have charged Mr. Shamam with fabricating history.)

Mr. Surkiss told the Leadership Bureau that if Mr. Shamam does not resign he will ask for a full-scale debate on the party magazine. Mr. Yadin said he was ready to hold a discussion on this issue. Meanwhile, he will meet with the editorial board to ensure that it acts with a sense of responsibility towards the party.

Mr. Shamam remained unperturbed. Indeed, he was critical of the party secretary-general when asked for his comment by this reporter. "I find it rather strange that the party secretary-general should not think it necessary to talk to me before issuing such a statement."

Hazani: Allon Plan blocks Jerusalem

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter
Social Welfare Minister Michael Hazani last night called for expansion of Jerusalem's area either by Government or private initiative. Addressing an N.R.P. Youth Division meeting in the Capital, the Minister urged "breaking the Allon Plan barrier because it blocks the eastward settlement of the Jewish ancestral heritage."

Declaring Jerusalem in the widest sense meant the top of the Judean and Samarian mountain ranges, Mr. Hazani urged construction of an additional belt of Jewish quarters to the east of Jerusalem towards Ma'ale Ha-Shulman. He also advocated extensive building to the south and north of the Capital. The Government had either to change its decision forbidding purchase of lands beyond the Green Line by private persons or itself take the initiative.

Mr. Hazani attacked other Ministries for hampering the expansion of Kiryat Arba at Hebron. He also said they were weakening the Etzion Bloc by refusing to establish new rural and urban centres south of Hebron and between Hebron and Bethlehem.

At another N.R.P. meeting in Jerusalem, N.R.P. executive chairman Meir Rafanelli criticised "certain government circles" for indifference in the face of American arms supplies to Arab states. He feared that Israel could not compete in the long run against such an enormous influx of sophisticated Western arms to Arab armaments. He therefore favoured Israeli support for a super-power agreement to stop the arms race in the Middle East.

Rabin: U.S. knows Saudi arms may harm Israel

TEL AVIV. — Israel's former Ambassador to the U.S., Yitzhak Rabin, said Friday the U.S. must know the Phantom jets it has agreed to sell Saudi Arabia could reach Israel's enemies.
But the deal was made to serve American interests "as they see them." He added that Israel must not relax its efforts to convince the Americans of the harm the arms deal could cause.
Speaking at the Beit Brenner Club here, Mr. Rabin said the State Department's Joseph Sisco was undoubtedly aware that such sophisticated equipment could be transferred to countries confronting Israel.

SUMMER VISITS BEGIN Amman lifts some travel curbs

Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter
The Amman authorities announced yesterday that students would be allowed unrestricted access to the administered territories to visit their families under the annual summer visits scheme, which begins today. Previous announcements had said the students would be allowed to remain in the territories for one month only.

Under the summer visits scheme, which lasts four and a half months, the Israeli authorities permit Arab citizens from all over the world to cross the Jordan bridges or fly in via Lod Airport. Permits are issued to residents of the territories who send them on to their relatives.

Yesterday's Jordanian Government announcement said that students could remain for the entire summer holiday. However, Jordanians who are not students are restricted to a one-month stay, while non-Jordanians would be allowed to remain for two months.

In contrast to previous restrictions, yesterday's made no mention of monetary restrictions. Reports from Amman last said that the new Jordanian arrangement of Premier Zaid Rifa' lifted all restrictions on Jordan subjects wishing to cross into West Bank. The relaxations expected to go into effect the present summer visits scheme is scheduled to start on Monday and introduce a programme enabling Arab citizens to visit their relatives the year round.

The Israeli authorities have forced the crossing posts at Allenby and the Damiya with scores of border officials cope with this year's influx. Security arrangements also in force.

Huge cement potential at Mitzpe Ramon "is ignored"

By HERBERT BEN-ADI
Jerusalem Post Reporter

MITZPE RAMON. — A French investor has encountered delays in getting Government approval for a cement plant he seeks to build here. Zvi Hazani, chairman of the Local Council, said last night.

Mr. Hazani said the investor, Joel Hertzberg, has conducted geological surveys in the area at his own expense for the past two years. He found an estimated potential of 80 million tons of cement raw material — enough to supply the country's needs for the next 80 years. He is backed by Germany's largest cement mill builders, Fohlsch of Munich — and he wished to build a $20m. plant.

A delegation of the Local Council called on Commerce and Industry Minister Ezer Weizman last week. Mr. Hazani said, but the Minister merely listened and said nothing. Mr. Hertzberg has also seen the Minister, he added, and reported Mr. Bar-Lev had been "favourably inclined."

The Government has known about the existence of the raw material deposits, but has failed to exploit them because of vested interests and politics, Mr. Hazani charged. "Our town, where 30 workers supply enough raw material to provide employment for 1,800 others, has been neglected for 15 years," Mr. Hazani complained. If the Ministry delays its reply to Mr. Hertzberg more than two weeks, the Local Council will go on strike, block the road to the town, and demonstrate in Jerusalem, he said.

Pension rights accord signed

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter
TEL AVIV. — An agreement has been signed ensuring continuity in pension rights to civil servants taking up jobs outside government employment. The signatories were the Histadrut, the Civil Service Commission, the Civil Servants Union and the seven Histadrut pension funds.

Hitherto civil servants, like municipal officials who are covered by budgetary pension schemes (i.e. paid for out of the government and municipal budgets), lost all their pension rights when they sought work elsewhere. Under the new agreement, their rights will be transferred to the ordinary contributory pension schemes organized by seven Histadrut pension funds.

PRESCRIPTION FOR SICK FUND

Separate politics and medicine at Kupat Holim, report urges

By MACABEE DEAN

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Physicians would replace now running Kupat Holim under a far-reaching reorganization urged by a distinguished study committee.

Work loads would also be reduced, it was announced at a press conference on Friday by Negev University Professor Moshe Frywies, who served as the committee's chairman.

Other recommendations, patients have a free choice of doctor in the district, access to specialists.

Members of the 10-member committee include: Dr. Shimon Gitter of Tel Aviv University Medical School and Meir Amit of the Ministry of Health. They were asked in November to study the Histadrut sick-fund and Holim director-general Asher.

The committee's recommendations include the demands made last year by the union of Kupat Holim doctors, which actively rebelled against Mr. Yehuda's plan, demanding complete reorganization and appointment of a new head. Dr. Ram Yishai, was not the 62 witnesses the committee heard, boycotted its work.

Frywies was asked at the press conference whether he accepted the recommendations — most important — whether he implement them. He said he would implement them, but that it was up to the Kupat Holim Central Committee (he heads) to decide.

ver, he emphasized that it would be "a Kupat Holim decision, and not a Histadrut one."

Detailing the recommendations, Prof. Frywies said they called for "complete separation of politics from implementation." The present political leadership would continue to make "policy," but this would then be handed over to an "active administration" for implementation. The "active administration" would consist of seven persons — with Mr. Yehuda as head, Dr. Haim Doron, Medical Director of Kupat Holim, as his deputy, and five "professionals."

The present "three regions and 15 districts" would be reorganized as eight districts. Each would be headed by a doctor if at all possible; if not, Kupat Holim would provide facilities for physicians to learn administration.

The present system of having both a "political" administrator and a physician, each with equal authority but with the stronger personality dominating, would be eliminated.

"The clinic would continue to be the first line of medical aid," Prof. Frywies said, adding that "each clinic should allow members a free choice of doctors, and be headed by a physician appointed for a term of five years."

Within the clinic itself, "no doctor should be forced to accept more than 30 to 40 patients a day." The present system, where a doctor receives "up to 120," would be eliminated, partly by shifting some of the clerical work to an assistant and partly by allowing patients free access to a specialist without having to go through their family doctor.

If the clinic doctor is a new immigrant, he should be required to undergo at least six months of training before seeing patients.

Moreover, and most important, the dualism between clinic and hospital should be eliminated. The same district head should be in charge of both, and every professional doctor in a clinic should not only be allowed, but be required, to spend part of his time in a hospital.

(At present, clinic doctors are not allowed into hospitals to practice medicine.)

The medical equipment in clinics (such as X-ray machines) should be used in two shifts, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., and from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m. There is no reason why expensive equipment should not be utilized to the utmost, Prof. Frywies said.

"Symbolic payment must be made for medicines — not only to preserve the health of the patient who gobbles down medicines, but also to prevent the doctor from over-prescribing." Moreover, each medicine should have the "true price" inscribed on it, so the patient can know "how much he's swallowing" each time he takes a pill.

The present "split day," where a doctor works in the morning and after a noon-break returns to the clinic for his afternoon shift, should be abolished in favour of a "continuous day," after which the doctor would pay home visits.

Prof. Frywies ended by observing that "the committee has not discussed the problem of private practice — that posed by Kupat Holim doctors who accept patients privately and then arrange for their admission to hospitals out of turn. However, this is a serious problem, and Kupat Holim should set up another committee to settle it. We of the committee do recommend that a Kupat Holim doctor should not receive a Kupat Holim patient privately."

Kollek warns of 'another Belfast' in Jerusalem

Mayor Teddy Kollek of Jerusalem warned in a radio interview on Friday that Jerusalem could become "another Belfast" if the city's Arab residents were made to feel like second-class citizens.

Speaking on Gali Zehavi's "This Week" programme, Mr. Kollek said he feared Israeli Jews were still far from recognizing that East Jerusalem Arabs are entitled to full rights like other citizens.

"I fear that if to Arab nationalist sentiment is added resentment over discrimination, the city might turn into another Belfast," the Mayor said.

"I wouldn't want my daughter to marry an Arab, nor do I wish to force him to live like a Jew," Mr. Kollek added. "But why can't we remain a nationalist Arab, as long as he respects the law and the State?"

Military Governor West Bank quiet

Judea and Samaria have been quiet from the security point of view for the past four years, with the population concerned mainly with its daily affairs. This was stated by the Military Governor of the West Bank, Tal-Aluf Raphael Vardi, speaking yesterday over the radio's "Weekly Newsreel."

He said the West Bank population has learned to live with the lack of a political solution to their situation, and are trying to make the best of it in terms of economic and social development.

Asked in what way the West Bank population could express itself politically, Tal-Aluf Vardi said they first had to want to do so. "To this day, we have not received a single request from any group wishing to form a political organization," he added. He said that the fact that both the terrorist organizations and Jordan would frown upon any manifestation of local political independence had something to do with this reluctance. (Item)

Teacher who disrupted 'Hallel' is 'anti-Israel'

Jerusalem Post Reporter

SAFAD. — Worshippers at the ancient Ari synagogue here have urged the Religious Council to disqualify Mr. Shalom Rosenthal as part-time Talmud instructor at the synagogue. Mr. Rosenthal, an adherent of the Satmar Hasidim, caused an uproar in the synagogue on Jerusalem Day last week, when he stopped the service after the cantor began saying the "Hallel" thanksgiving prayer, as ordered by the Chief Rabbi.

In a letter to the Religious Council, the worshippers complain that Mr. Rosenthal frequently made libellous statements against the state, and allegedly said that the "Hallel" should be recited if the Arabs take over the government of the Land of Israel.

Katzir follows Shazar on Manger Committee

President Ephraim Katzir has agreed to serve as honorary president of the Manger Prize Committee, a position held by President Ze'ev Shazar for the past five years.

The President announced his agreement at a lunch at the King David Hotel on Thursday. Mr. Shazar will take over from Meyer Weisgal as chairman of the judges' panel, while Shalom Rosenthal will serve as chairman of the Committee.

The lunch was attended by Mrs. Golda Meir, Mr. Shazar, Jewish Agency Executive Chairman Arye Pincus, Tel Aviv Mayor Rabinovitch, Mrs. Hanna Rovina of Habimah and others. Speeches were in Yiddish on this occasion, and a Jewish mood developed, with many stories being told, while Hannah Rovina recited one of Manger's poems. Only President Katzir spoke in Hebrew, explaining that he had learned Yiddish because his parents had used it as a "secret language," but not well enough to speak it now.

The Manger Prize, named after the late Yiddish poet, Ze'ev Manger, and initiated and financed by Mr. Weisgal, is awarded for literary works in Yiddish, both in Israel and abroad.

Coach, capt. of national team 'Israel should leave Asian soccer group'

TEL AVIV. — The coach and captain of the national soccer team on Friday called for Israel to opt out of Asian soccer and attempt to find its place in European football.

The national football team returned Thursday night from Seoul, where Israel was ousted from the 1974 world cup losing 0:1 to South Korea in the final of an Asian zone grouping.

Captain Zvi Rosen said: "We are not like other Asians and are not welcomed by them. I have long been convinced that Israel should find its place in European football. The Israeli team now has a sound foundation." Rosen said the players were tired in Seoul at the end of a long league season, at the end of which they sometimes had to play three matches in a week.

The outgoing national team coach, Edmond Smilovitch, who has been in charge of the team for the past two years, said he was satisfied with its play in the matches in Seoul. He too came out strongly for leaving Asian soccer, and complained about the refereeing which he considered biased against Israel.

"Smilo" had no advice to give his successor, David Schwelitzer, who takes over the national team immediately.

Only Football Association President, Mr. Pinhas Koppel, was hesitant about leaving Asian soccer. He said Israel's place there was "also a political consideration."

Coach Edmond Smilovitch, in a statement at Lod Airport, said "South Korea simply played better." The Koreans were on their home ground and the referee was obviously hostile, but Israel's loss was not to be blamed on these factors.

Katzir follows Shazar on Manger Committee

President Ephraim Katzir has agreed to serve as honorary president of the Manger Prize Committee, a position held by President Ze'ev Shazar for the past five years.

The President announced his agreement at a lunch at the King David Hotel on Thursday. Mr. Shazar will take over from Meyer Weisgal as chairman of the judges' panel, while Shalom Rosenthal will serve as chairman of the Committee.

The lunch was attended by Mrs. Golda Meir, Mr. Shazar, Jewish Agency Executive Chairman Arye Pincus, Tel Aviv Mayor Rabinovitch, Mrs. Hanna Rovina of Habimah and others. Speeches were in Yiddish on this occasion, and a Jewish mood developed, with many stories being told, while Hannah Rovina recited one of Manger's poems. Only President Katzir spoke in Hebrew, explaining that he had learned Yiddish because his parents had used it as a "secret language," but not well enough to speak it now.

The Manger Prize, named after the late Yiddish poet, Ze'ev Manger, and initiated and financed by Mr. Weisgal, is awarded for literary works in Yiddish, both in Israel and abroad.

TUNIS PAPER SETS OUT CONDITION FOR TALKS

TUNIS (UPI). — The essential requirement for a solution of the Middle East problem is recognition by Israel of Palestinian rights, the Tunisian newspaper, "Al Amal," said yesterday.

The newspaper, Arabic-language journal of the Destourian Party, Tunisia's only political group, was commenting on President Habib Bourguiba's offer of a Tunisian-Israeli meeting to seek a solution to the Arab-Israeli crisis. Said "Al Amal": "The essential thing is not the inauguration of a dialogue between Arabs and Israelis but the recognition of the rights of the Palestinian people to their country, without hatreds and complexes."

Mr. Bourguiba recently suggested he meet with an Israeli leader to discuss a way out of the Middle East deadlock. Israel Foreign Minister Abba Eban replied that he or Premier Golda Meir were ready to talk to Mr. Bourguiba.

On Friday, the 67-year-old Tunisian leader said Israel must agree in advance to discuss the "legitimate" rights of the Palestinian Arabs. Another newspaper, "Sabah" said yesterday that Mr. Bourguiba had put Israel's back to the wall and proved that it was not the Arabs who were refusing to talk. Israel, it said, "continues to refuse to recognize the principle of non-annexation of occupied Arab territories and the rights of the Palestinians to their country."

WATERGATE SPYING REPORT

Ervin says documents show 'Gestapo mind'

WASHINGTON (Reuters). — Senate investigators have launched an inquiry into undercover activities at the Justice Department, including possible spying on people who disagreed with Nixon administration views, senate sources said Friday.

The inquiry was revealed after Senator Sam Ervin, chairman of the Senate committee investigating the Watergate bugging scandal, said he had studied documents which he interpreted as a plan to set up an operation to spy on people who disagreed with views of the administration.

Senator Ervin said the documents revealed a Gestapo mentality and would be a great shock to the American people if they were released.

The documents, classified as "top secret," were removed by John Dean from the White House before he was fired a month ago.

Dean gave the documents to Judge John Sirica, who is presiding over the grand jury probe of the bugging of democratic party headquarters. The judge turned over copies to Senator Ervin.

Senate sources said they had some information that part of the plan for a domestic intelligence operation had been put into effect.

President Nixon said in a statement that the scheme, which included plans for breaking and entering in the name of national security, had been scrapped because of objections by J. Edgar Hoover, the late director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The objections to Senator Ervin's expanded Watergate hearings, which will resume on Tuesday, were based on fears that testimony presented before the public hearings may prevent witnesses from being prosecuted on grounds that the publicity would prejudice trial proceedings.

Beirut-terrorist peace meeting postponed

Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter and agencies.

A meeting of a joint Lebanese-terrorist committee supervising peace arrangements between the two sides, which was scheduled for yesterday, has been postponed until tomorrow, Lebanese Premier Amin Hafez said last night.

The Premier, who heads the so-called "supreme coordination committee," said the meeting was postponed because most of the terrorist members were outside Beirut.

The names of the committee members have not been disclosed but Hafez earlier said the committee would hold meetings in his office every Saturday.

The committee was formed to supervise the implementation of the secret understanding reached on May 17 to end the clashes and tension between the Lebanese Army and Palestinian terrorists.

The postponement followed a statement by President Suleiman Frangieh warning that "everyone living on Lebanese territory must respect its laws."

The statement, made at the President's monthly meeting with Lebanese newspaper publishers, was seen to have been directed at the terrorists.

The statement was believed to have sparked off a dispute between the terrorist leaders and Fatah leader Yassar Arafat, who met the Lebanese President on Friday.

Arafat's meeting with Frangieh was their first since last month's fighting between the Lebanese Army and the terrorists. It was arranged by Kuwait's Foreign Minister, Sheikh Sabah el-Ahmed el-Jaber. In contrast to previous meetings, Arafat came to the meeting without his armed body guards — about 50 men usually accompany the Fatah chief into Lebanon's presidential palace.

Environment Day Tuesday

GENEVA (Reuters). — In Paris and Tokyo thousands of people will leave their cars at home on Tuesday and go to work on foot or by bicycle.

In Bonn, international experts will cruise along the heavily-polluted Rhine and discuss ways of cleaning up the world's dirty rivers and lakes.

In London, 500 scientists, businessmen and government authorities will meet to exchange ideas on controlling pollution of the earth, air and water. In Holland, 200,000 schoolchildren will ask down to draw their ideas of the surroundings people live in.

These are just some of the ways in which people all over the world will celebrate June 5 this year as World Environment Day, under the slogan "Only one earth."

Their aim is to bring home to the public the ways in which man is threatening his own future by fouling his environment, and to show how he can work for its improvement.

It will be just one year on Tuesday since 113 nations met in Stockholm for the first U.N. conference on the environment and decided to call a halt to worldwide pollution, the destruction of irreplaceable resources, and to the harmful deficiencies in man's living and working environment.

Ulster: Another motiveless murder

BELFAST (UPI). — The police are treating the death of a 25-year-old Roman Catholic man — found hanging by his feet from railings in downtown Belfast — as murder, a police spokesman said yesterday here.

The man, Samuel McCleave, 25, of Belfast, had injuries to his eye and mouth, the spokesman said. "It was another motiveless murder. As far as we know McCleave was not a member of any particular organization and it would seem he died because of his religion."

"Once more madness in our midst have come up with a horrific slaying of an innocent person."

McCleave's death brings to 809 the number of people who have died in almost four years of strife in Ulster.

McCleave was the second man found hanging in the past 24 hours. The first man, a 37-year-old Catholic facing trial on robbery charges, has not so far been included in the overall toll, the spokesman said.

Bomb explosions in Belfast and Londonderry damaged buildings yesterday, but there were no casualties, he said.

A 150-lb. bomb in Belfast caused a hail of glass from surrounding eight-story office buildings, but a warning had been given of its presence in a van, and police had time to clear the area.

'GLAMOURISES HIJACKING'

Pilots oppose Khaled book

LONDON (UPI). — British pilots are protesting publication of an autobiography by hijacker Leda Khaled's autobiographer.

"We take the strongest possible exception to this book being published in this country," Gordon Hurley, spokesman for the British Airline Pilots' Association said yesterday.

Miss Khaled's book "My People Shall Live" is due for publication in Britain tomorrow. In it Miss Khaled, 27, describes how she hijacked a TWA Boeing 707 in August, 1969, which was later blown up on the ground in Damascus. In 1970 she and an accomplice tried to hijack a New York-bound El Al Boeing 707 over the North Sea. Her companion was killed and she was captured by El Al security guards. She was detained by police after the plane made an emergency landing at London Airport. She was released after being held for six weeks at Baking police station, which she calls "the Baking Hilton."

Mr. Hurley said the Association, representing 4,500 pilots, had written to the National Aviation Security Committee, a semi-government body formed to co-ordinate airport security, saying "the book can prove detrimental to the safety of the travelling public if it were allowed to be placed on sale at airports."

He said the book "glamorises the whole business and bestows some kind of approval on it."

A spokesman for the publishers, Hodder and Stoughton, said: "Anybody reading it would get absolutely nowhere if they tried to hijack an airplane. I mean, she failed herself the second time, didn't she?"

ident Papadopoulos, the workers are with you."

Four top Greek officers resigned yesterday. They were Lt. Gen. Nicholas Dambas of the army, Rear Admirals Theodoros Manopoulos and Aristidou Yannopoulos, and Vice Air Marshal Emmanuel Ekmamuel. The timing of their departures generated speculation that they were unhappy with abolition of the monarchy and left on their own accord rather than clash with the regime.

Ex-Premier Stephanos Stephanopoulos and 13 former ministers denounced the "abolition of the monarchy" by the tough dictatorship. In a statement they said the abolition "will create divisions detrimental to the national interests." They described it as "illegal" and said the only rightful solution was to make "people free to choose for themselves."

Opposition to the government's arbitrary decision to abolish the monarchy was building up yesterday among former politicians.

There was little reaction to the change from ordinary Greeks. Most remained indifferent and life in Athens Friday night was like any other night, with people going to taverns and open-air cinemas. The indifference may have stemmed from the fact that the Greek press had for the past few days been predicting the move.

The abolition of the monarchy was precipitated by the discovery of a Navy mutiny alleged to have been carried out with the knowledge and consent of King Constantine. The Ministry of National Defence said in a statement that it had proof that the leader of the coup, cashiered Navy Captain George Konofaos, had sent an emissary to the king informing him of the plot and seeking consent for the mutiny.

About 40 royalist officers, including 32 high-ranking naval officers, are being held in connection with the planned mutiny.

The Salamis Naval Base near Piraeus, the port of Athens, and some airfields near the capital are being heavily guarded by troops. The Navy and the Air Force are considered pro-Royalist and not so loyal to the Army-backed regime.

U.K. celebrates with Queen

LONDON (UPI). — Still aglow with the memory of Prince Anne's engagement, Britain yesterday celebrated Queen Elizabeth's official birthday and the 20th anniversary of her coronation.

As thousands of Britons and tourists gathered for the trooping the colour ceremony marking the Queen's birthday, Buckingham Palace let slip what most of her subjects suspected: Elizabeth II, now 47, plans no early abdication.

The really big occasion will be in four years time for the 25th anniversary of the Queen's accession to the throne. A palace official said in explaining why no major celebration was planned for the 20th anniversary.

WHITE HOUSE WARNS CONGRESS

Cut in bombing funds will aid Communist

WASHINGTON (Reuters). — The State Department repeated its warning that denying the Nixon administration defence funds to finance the bombing of Cambodia could undercut U.S. negotiators trying to end Vietnam truce violations.

The warning came after the Senate Thursday approved an amendment to cut off further bombing funds, putting both houses of Congress on record for the first time as opposing the bombing.

President Nixon's supporters in Congress expressed confidence they can delay final congressional approval of the amendment, possibly for some weeks.

The administration believes that approval of the bombing ban would bolster Communist determination to continue fighting in Cambodia.

Presidential envoy Dr. Henry Kissinger meets North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho in Paris this week and has expressed confidence that an agreement will be reached on reinitiating the shaky peace agreement.

The administration contends the threat of continued bombing necessary to pressure North Vietnam into agreeing to end violations.

The State Department said weeks ago that Congressional action to restrict or eliminate U.S. military activity in Cambodia or could encourage the intrusions of the other side.

Senate Republican Leader Scott, who managed to delay Senate vote by two weeks, said duty was to give Dr. Kissinger — "this we have done."

The Senate amendment, in an appropriations bill, is reconciled with a somewhat anti-bombing amendment approved by the House of Representatives May 10.

'U.S. WILL RESIST OIL SUPPLY CUTS'

PARIS (UPI). — The magazine "Le Point" said yesterday that the U.S. would drop paratroops in Libya, Syria and on the Israeli-Lebanese frontier if Arab oil states cut supplies to the West.

The magazine gave no source for the report, which appeared in its "confidential" section. It said: "The U.S. will not allow at any price the cutting of its oil sources from the Middle East. In case of conflict, their military plan, named 'Prometheus Fire,' provides for the dispatch of specialized paratroop divisions to the old Wileus Base in Libya, as well as to the port of Latakia in Syria and to Ras el Nakoura (Rosh Hanukra) on the Lebanese-Israeli border, where the Iraqi oil pipeline passes."

"Le Point" is one of France's major weekly news magazines.

The magazine also said that West Germany's secret service has learned that Palestinian terrorists will maintain their headquarters in East Germany.

The report said: "The services of West Germany have to Western capitals a note the nerve centre of the Palestine resistance will be maintained East Germany. Some military stations will be placed at postal near Leipzig."

U.S. colonel shot in Iran

TEHRAN (Reuters). — Two men shot and killed an American officer as he was leaving his home yesterday and sped off on a motor cycle. The victim was Lewis Hawkins, 42, from Plymouth, Indiana, a military advisor to the Iranian Armed Forces.

He had been here since last year and leaves a widow and three children.

Iran is being supplied with sophisticated U.S. arms and U.S. advisers have been in the country for some time as train fliers.

71 KILLED IN AIR CRASHES

Seventy-one persons were killed in two airplane crashes on Thursday and Friday.

Twenty-three persons died on Friday when a Brazilian jetliner with engine trouble crashed and exploded during an out-of-control landing in the Amazon jungle city of Sao Luis. Cruzeiro do Sul Airlines said all seven crew members and 16 passengers died.

The French-built Caravelle was on its daily run from Belem, at the mouth of the Amazon River, to Rio de Janeiro. The plane's captain reported trouble in an engine 30 minutes before the jet was to make its first scheduled stop.

Pilots of Indian and other airlines reportedly have complained several times about the landing equipment at New Delhi's Palam Airport, where 45 people died in an airliner crash on Thursday.

The complaints had been about the erratic functioning of Palam's instrument landing system.

This was one of two radar guidance systems reported to have been out of action when an Indian Airlines Boeing 737, approaching the airport at the end of a flight from Madras, crashed short of the field with 48 people on board. (AP, Reuters)

Norma Levy will lose plush home

LONDON (UPI). — Norma Levy, red-headed Irish callgirl at the centre of Britain's recent sex scandal, is to lose her $75,000 luxury home, her landlords said Friday.

Pictures taken in the plush Marida Vale apartment resulted in the resignation last week from Prime Minister Edward Heath's government of Air Force Minister Lord Lambton. Another minister, Earl Jellicoe, also resigned after he and Lambton admitted associating with prostitutes.

The property company owners of Mrs. Levy's apartment said its use for "immoral purposes" contravened the lease.

Mrs. Levy, who is sought by British police, was last reported in Brazil together with her husband, cab-driver Colin Levy, and a former boyfriend.

BONN ROW OVER 'VOTE BUYING'

BONN (Reuters). — A major political row was brewing here yesterday after a former opposition member of parliament was reported to have admitted he used his vote to keep Chancellor Willy Brandt in power during a crucial no-confidence ballot last year.

The national weekly news magazine, "Der Spiegel," quoted a former Roman Catholic deputy, Julius Steiner, as saying in an interview: "I dropped a blank ballot. That was like a no (to the no-confidence motion)."

The "Der Spiegel" report came soon after an opposition leader had called for an investigation of the secret Bundestag vote during the budget debate on April 27 last year, when the opposition failed by two votes to topple Mr. Brandt's left-liberal coalition.

Dr. Leo Wagner, business manager of the Christian Democratic Union opposition (CDU) told reporters he was demanding a re-examination of the ballot papers because of growing rumours and press reports that the ruling Social Democratic Party (SPD) "bought" the votes of two CDU men to "save itself from defeat."

Mr. Steiner, 48, sat in parliament for three years. He did not stand for re-election in last November's general elections. On Friday his local party chairman, Dr. Hans Pöhliger, the CDU

Premier of the State of Baden-Wuerttemberg, gave him 72 hours to reply to newspaper allegations that he gave Mr. Brandt his vote after reaching an agreement with a senior SPD politician.

A Social Democrat spokesman refused to comment on the allegations, saying the party regarded them as "untenable hypotheses."

The first press report on the affair was published in the newspaper "Suedwest Presse" last Friday. The paper alleged that Mr. Steiner was offered 250,000 marks (about £170,000) — payable into a Swiss bank account — or an equivalent life pension. Whether he accepted the offer, and if so in what form, was not clear, the newspaper said. (Steiner has denied any financial motives.)

It alleged that two of the ballots in the vote were marked with a pencil so that government tellers could identify them as having been pledged for Mr. Brandt for later payment.

The name of the second deputy has not been disclosed. If the allegations are proved true they could place in question the parliamentary basis for Brandt's "Ostpolitik" of detente with Eastern Europe.

A few days after the no-confidence vote the non-aggression pact with the Soviet Union was ratified by parliament.

Ships ablaze in New York

NEW YORK (Reuters). — Fires and explosions ripped through a Belgian oil tanker and an U.S. container vessel after they collided early yesterday beneath the Verrazano Narrows Bridge, the world's longest suspension bridge, at the mouth of New York harbour.

At least seven people were killed and another 12 were reported missing after the collision between the 26,487-ton tanker Eseo Brussels, of Antwerp, and the 17,902-ton New York-based container vessel Sea Witch, police said.

Flames shot 12 metres into the air turning the midnight sky bright orange as the two ships locked together and floated into the open sea. They finally came to rest just off Coney Island, New York's seaside amusement centre.

Dozens of tugs and small craft rushed to the rescue as seamen leapt into the water from the burning ships.

Police said one of the five dead taken from the water was the Sea Witch's captain, William Paterson. A total of 78 people were believed to have been aboard the two vessels. Police said they had reports that 61 men got ashore alive.

Hundreds of residents in Brooklyn and Staten Island rushed to the shoreline in the middle of the night with flashlights to help in the rescue work.

Nixon 'highly satisfied' with Pompidou summit

WASHINGTON (Reuters). — President Richard Nixon is highly satisfied with his Iceland summit meeting with President Georges Pompidou and it appears to have brought slightly closer his hopes for a new "Atlantic Charter."

Mr. Nixon returned to Washington on Friday night believing he had secured Mr. Pompidou's agreement for international talks later this year on such a charter.

President Nixon's national security adviser Henry Kissinger told reporters that a spokesman for President Pompidou was not well informed when he reported after the summit that the French had made no agreement to take part in further talks to be followed by a U.S.-European conference of deputy foreign ministers. Dr. Kissinger said President Nixon "achieved what we set out to do" and France agreed to a procedure that was essentially what the U.S. had recommended.

Mr. Nixon would like the signing of a new Atlantic charter to take place at a multilateral summit at the crowning point of his planned visit to Europe in October or November this year.

France has expressed the strongest reservations about such a charter, which would set principles and guidelines for the tough bargaining expected between America and Europe over trade, money and defence problems.

Iceland threatens Nato

REYKJAVIK (Reuters). — Iceland will give formal notice this month that it wants a revision of the treaty on the stationing of U.S. troops at the Nato base here, Foreign Minister Einar Agustsson announced yesterday.

The decision had been taken, he said, because Nato had given no positive response to the Icelandic complaint about Britain over the "cod war." Public opinion is turning very strongly against Nato, the Minister said.

Mr. Agustsson said he had discussed the treaty revision last week with U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers, who accompanied President Nixon to the Franco-American summit talks held here, and informed him that notice would be served on Nato later this month.

THE MINISTRY OF COMMUNICATIONS

ANNOUNCES

Today, Friday, June 1, 1973, at 2 p.m., the following changes in telephone numbers will go into effect:

JERUSALEM. All numbers starting with an 8 will be changed to six-digit numbers, by the addition of a 2 in front of the number.
There will be no other changes in these numbers.

In Ofakim, Yeruham, the Sodom and Mitzpe Ramon district, and from Beersheba to Ophira (Sharm-e-Sheikh) the first digit of numbers will be changed from 9 to 8.

Anyone dialling a number that has been changed will hear a recorded message, giving details of the change.

These changes are necessitated by development work at exchanges, intended to permit an increase in the capacity of the exchanges, and the connection of additional telephones for the benefit of those on the waiting list.

Please remember to dial the new number, after the change-over. In this way, you will avoid unnecessary problems, and unnecessary loading of the telephone system.

Inter-marriage frequent among Brazil's Jews

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter
Brazil's Jewish community has not increased in size for the past ten years because of the high rate of intermarriage, Coalition chairman Moshe Baran told the Alignment Knesset faction on his return from a fund-raising tour of Brazil.
Mr. Baran said that about 40 per cent of Brazil's married Jews have non-Jewish spouses.
He urged that all separate fund-raising campaigns in Brazil be terminated, and one joint appeal established.
Mr. Baran said that at every stop on his tour, and in every Jewish community, he had been lobbied by representatives of the Lubavitcher Rebbe's Habad Hassidim, who entreated him to use his influence in the Knesset to amend the "Who's a Jew" Law (that part of the Law of Return which mentions conversion to Judaism without specifying Halachic conversion). "The Lubavitcher Rebbe has a private eye network all over the place," Mr. Baran said, half-seriously, half-joking.

Poll shows Germans favour Israel

BONN (Reuters). — A leading public opinion poll here says that only five per cent of West Germans sympathize with the Arabs in the Middle East conflict.
The poll by the Allensbach Research Institute reports that 37 per cent favour Israel, with another 37 per cent "neutral" and 21 per cent are undecided.

'COMMITTEES CAN'T MAKE EXCITING THEATRE'

By MARK SEGAL
Jerusalem Post Reporter

ON the same evening that Leonard Schach's production of Harold Pinter's "Old Times" opened at the Habimah National Theatre in Tel Aviv two weeks ago, the same play created a theatrical scandal in Rome. Luigi Visconti's production had the two actresses and one actor appear nude with a jazz combo in the background. The playwright's agent promptly called in the police and had the play shut down. By now most of the people involved are suing each other.

"Old Times" was reviewed by our Theatre Critic in Friday's Weekend Magazine.

In Tel Aviv, the Cape Town-born director does not use such far-out gimmicks, but his latest Pinter production appears to be in for a long run. This playgoer found the Habimah Little Hall packed with an engrossed audience. Despite no advance publicity and no programmes to explain Pinter's subtleties, especially as the translation was inadequate.

Leonard Schach is celebrating his 10th year with the Hebrew stage by directing a piece by his old friend, Harold Pinter. In the 1950s Mr. Schach, already a prominent South African producer, was at a party given by the Bristol Repertory Company when one of the actors offered him a crumpled script. The actor was Harold Pinter, and the play was "The Birthday Party." It was Schach who made "The Birthday Party" into a milestone in the annals of Israeli theatre, causing critics to rave that "henceforth we will talk of the Israeli theatre as pre-Schach and post-Schach."

Congo show

The Pinter production, which is Schach's 21st play, is the fulfilment of a promise to the Habimah 13 years ago. During his visit here in 1960, the late Max Brod, who was then in charge of the Habimah repertoire, approached Schach about putting on a Lorca play, but nothing materialized.

In Cape Town Schach set up his own company after helping found the National Theatre of South Africa. He had 81 people on the payroll at one time, with one company in Cape Town, one in Johannesburg and a third touring — it took shows as far north as the Congo.

Meanwhile he had been one of the eight founders of the I.T.I. (International Theatre Institute), and directed abroad "The Mad Woman of Chailot" — at the experimental Manchester Library Theatre (1953); Pirandello's "Rules of the Game" at the London Arts Theatre with Donald Pleasance (1965). Some years later he worked in Belgium, staging a French version of Arthur Miller's "After the Fall" and Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" at the Theatre Royal du Parc in Brussels in the presence of the King and Queen of the Belgians. He was awarded the Belgian Drama Critics Prize in New York he assisted Elia Kazan in the world premiere of Arthur Miller's "After the Fall" at Lincoln Centre.

Children's play

It was there he obtained the rights for its debut at the Cameri Theatre with fine roles for Gila Alma-gor, Orna Porat and Gideon She-mer. This led to his contract as the Cameri's resident director. After the children's play "Circus Adventure" — revived four times — and "The Oppenheimer Case" with Yossi Yadin, he produced his first play with an actress he greatly admires — Hanna Maron. Together they put on the first Israeli production of "Hay Fever," which ran for two years and rescued the Cameri from the financial doldrums. (Indeed most of his plays have been money makers like Neil Simon's "Plaza Hotel.") Next he distinguished himself with Reem's "Hedda Gabler" with Miss Maron, and later his Miller productions. Branching out to the Haifa Theatre for Genet's "The Balcony" and to Zavit (now defunct) for Sartre's "Altona," he still continued to divide his working year between Israel and South Africa.

Leonard Schach's theatrical experience and his love of music readied him for the challenge of producing the first full-length electronic opera, which will have its world premiere in this year's Israel Festival. It is Yosef Tal's newest work entitled "Masada 963," commissioned for Israel's 25th Anniversary.

Form and content

He is rather wary when questioned on the Israeli theatre, but is ready to say: "More attention is needed for the aesthetics of the theatre. There is too much emphasis on content, too little on form. I am amazed at the lack of an aesthetic approach to the play's form and I am not sure that this does not penetrate into the play's performance."

He has one cogent criticism: "One problem for Israeli directors is that we have few beautiful actresses to choose from. Why, the girl soldiers who marched in the Army Parade were more attractive than most actresses available." What would he recommend for the theatre here? "I believe that theatre should be run by an enlightened despot. The artistic side should be in the hands of one man with deep belief in theatre, and he should be a director and not a layman. The great European theatre companies were built up by inspired directors. Exciting theatre cannot be produced by a show of committee hands."

Interestingly enough, Schach mentioned only Giora Godik (the impresario who left Israel under a cloud leaving with massive debts, an outstanding producer. He noted that Godik gave Israel the musical show and a number of important plays — "If Godik was not himself a creative producer, at least he was a creative producer."

He said he would like to open an English Theatre in Israel, for which he believes there is a great potential in the audience and in actors. "The chief reason the scheme has not yet materialized," he said, "is because I am waiting patiently for the moment when that English Theatre will be as professional as the Hebrew theatre."

Michael Malsky, cello, Lina Jacobson, piano (Tary Back: 2, for Unaccompanied Cello; Sonata "Arpeggione"; Sonata for Unaccompanied Cello; Sonata, opus 10, No. 2.)

EL Malsky is an artist of est promise. An immigrant U.S.S.R., he is very young, approach is serious, searching right expression and interpretation. He is, of till under the influence of 1, and, particularly, of his (Rostropovich), but an artist survive by imitating even glorious example of his Malsky is highly sensitive go far if he finds a guide free development and an live control over his pro-

He has a marked tendency to draw out slow movements which can become a danger. The tendency to slow down at the slightest provocation is shared by most of his colleagues who have come here from Russia. His interpretation of the Bach Suite demonstrated his struggle for individual expression, and if it was not all acceptable, it was most stimulating. The "Arpeggione" was too slow, generally but his phrases have meaning.
In the solo sonata by Hindemith he showed that he is capable of stronger accents and more dynamic motion but the Beethoven came out best. Lina Malskaya-Jacobson accompanied her brother lovingly, but some more active drive would have enhanced both their performances.

Electrifying performance

The Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, Subscription Concert No. 16. Conductor: Andrew Davis. Soloist: Andre Watts, piano. (Tel Aviv, Mann Auditorium, May 28). Bach: Brandenburg Concerto No. 3 in D Major — with the participation of Chama Toub, violin; Uri Shoham, flute and Andre Watts, piano; Liszt: "Totentanz" for Piano and Orchestra; Beethoven: Symphony No. 7 in A Major.

ANDRE Watts' performance of A Liszt's "Totentanz" was electrifying. Displaying magnificent virtuosity, he stunned his listeners with a breathtaking tempo. His sharp rhythm, and slightly metallic tone added an element of diabolic grotesqueness. Andrew Davis' careful accompaniment helped to make it a sensational success.
In Beethoven's "Seventh," Davis succeeded in the more challenging task of interpreting a well-known work. What made the symphony so amiable was Davis' outstanding sense of form. Orchestral sound neither too light nor too compact, rhythm, accentuated just to the right extent, dynamics alive, yet not exaggerated and tempi well chosen.

Mourning atmosphere

It seemed that Uri Pizuka retained some of this mood while playing the Brahms Concerto. Despite the orchestra's drop in pitch, Avi Catrowsky could lift it only on sustained tones — Pizuka bravely went through his task. He is not an outstanding Brahms player, but there were some really good moments of interpretation in the 2nd and 3rd movements. In general the execution could have been more even, especially as the conductor was an inspiring and influential supporter, trying for a less stereotyped reading.

South African whites want 'pill' free for blacks only

By RICHARD WAGNER

CAPETOWN (Odes). — Contraceptive pill has become the centre of a racial war in South Africa with community leaders demanding that it be available free to whites and blacks alike.

Mr. P.H. van der Merwe, who has been in South Africa for six to eight years, said the pill should be available to all ethnic groups.

He said the pill should be available to all ethnic groups. He said the pill should be available to all ethnic groups.

JERUSALEM MAKES WAR ON ITS CUNNING CATS

By Judy Siegel

Special to The Jerusalem Post

THE consensus among Jeru-saLEM's stray cat population, I have found, is that like here is still rather pleasant.

True, there are many more people and cars to elude, and they can be a terrible nuisance.

Yet nothing can compare to those clear, balmy days of early summer.

They're perfect for scavenging a

conveniently open or sifting between iron railings or scampering up stone stairways. And what is more amusing than a night spent howling and yowling a serenade to one's closest friends and a few unappreciative householders?

Unfortunately, Dr. Tommy Blumenfeld, chief of the city's Veterinary Service, is not amused. His tiny office at 10 Rehov Yaffo must handle the complaints.

"In 1948," he explains, "conditions were hard for all of us, and there were only a few scrawny cats. Today in a more affluent and waste-producing society, they are a much bigger problem."

He used to send men to poison

every stray cat that was reported.

But now they first ask if the trash cans nearby are kept tightly closed.

"If we find that garbage is strewn everywhere, we don't do anything. As long as the cats find sources of food, it's a lost war." Even when there are no sanitation problems, the wandering cats usually find generous benefactors among the tenants themselves.

Still, the Veterinary Service destroys over 50 cats every month. Tardiness, a powdery chemical harmless to humans and to dogs, is mixed into a can of sardines. "We sit and wait for them, watch them gobble it up and then remove the bottles after they die painlessly." It is not a pleasant task, but it must be done in the interest of public health. Not only do the cats scatter garbage, but they are potential carriers of rabies.

Contrary to the opinion of some angry pet owners, the doctor insists that "our men never leave the poison around without supervision. They are under strict orders to collect it immediately whenever it is left unattended." Police have found that some people bothered by strays have done the job illegally themselves.

During the month of April, the Municipality sent out 760 letters warning offenders about open trash cans and 82 fines of IL50 each were levied. However, only about 10 per cent of them are paid; the rest either lead to a correction of the violation or are sent to the Municipal Court.

"The problem has such an utterly simple solution," asserts Dr. Blumfeld. The cats just have to be kept shut. "If we killed every stray cat we could stop them, and the containers were still left uncovered, we would then have an infestation of rats and mice."

The city's Sanitation Department, which Dr. Blumfeld describes as a "highly efficient operation," is encouraging, among other devices, the use of strong plastic bags for the disposal of garbage. "But they should be put out in the streets only a short time before they are collected," he says. Otherwise, if given the opportunity, those cunning cats will gnaw right through them.

Keeping men from dreaming

WASHINGTON (AP). — U.S. Navy scientists have developed a "day-dream-warming" machine designed to sound off if a person hooked up to it isn't concentrating on the job he is doing.

The machine offers promise for keeping airplane pilots, radar and sonar operators and long-distance truck drivers on the alert, the Navy says.

Professor Karl Monitor of the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland, where the machine was developed, says in a "Naval Research Review" report that the navy has no intention of using such machines to see whether Annapolis midshipmen are daydreaming during studies. But midshipmen, who were volunteer participants in a long-range project on brain-wave research, helped develop the machine by occasionally not concentrating on their studies.

During the summer of 1972, observations on brain-wave norms were noted to be indifferent among students who were "studying."

"It became possible to tell when a person who was reading the words of a book was thinking about something else — working on a mathematical problem but thinking about his girl friend — looking at equipment operating but thinking about what he would do during his next leave," Prof. Monitor said.

These observations led to the development of an "attention-level analyzer," into which can be dialed the level of concentration an individual should be using plus "an allowable daydreaming factor."

"When the individual exceeds the allowable daydreaming factor, he will be so alerted by a tone. If he continues to daydream beyond an acceptable limit, a second alarm will sound, notifying another person."

The device is still experimental, but Prof. Monitor says the studies thus far have given hope for its use to keep attention sharp.

THE WEISGALS — FIFTY YEARS OF MARRIAGE

By Diana Lerner

Special to The Jerusalem Post

"WHAT do you want for your golden wedding anniversary?"

Meyer Weisgal asked his wife.

"A divorce," she said.

The same question and answer have recurred over 50 years of what Shirley Weisgal says is a very happy marriage.

Next week Meyer Weisgal is giving her a gold bracelet, "an award for 50 years of endurance," at a family gathering at the home of their son Michael Weisgal in Roxbury, Connecticut. The last

family reunion was two years ago on Shirley's birthday. At that time, the invitation to the party read: "Meyer, Mandy, Helen and David invite you to the 20th anniversary of Shirley's 50th birthday."

Playing hostess has kept her in shape, perhaps. Although Meyer

Weisgal has retired from the presidency and active direction of the Weizmann Institute of Science, he still spends 10 to 12 hours a day working in one of his four offices there. Most of the work is done at home and he continues to make demands on his wife to entertain scientists and celebrities. "If not for that, she says, "I might now have had a perfect command of Hebrew. But I was always being called out of the ulpan class because we had guests at home."

Although they are now in smaller quarters, the Weisgals nevertheless still hold both fund-raising parties and closed meetings of the Institute. They have lived on the Institute campus since 1949.

"I met Meyer during the Sheke-

Meyer and Shirley Weisgal campaign of the Zionist Organization of America," Shirley relates,

"and ever since then all the events in my life seem to be connected with a Zionist happening." Her honeymoon, she reports, was spent as secretary as well as bride, at a

Zionist Convention in Atlantic

City in 1923, joined by three-quarters of their wedding guests.

Shmuryahu Levin who had escorted the groom to the chapel had warned her of the hazards of being married to an ardent Zionist and predicted long periods of absence. However, Shirley has managed to join him on most of his trips, and to act as his secretary when no one else was available. Their silver wedding anniversary was celebrated together with the establishment of the Jewish State and this current anniversary will launch the Weizmann

Centennial fund-raising effort.

"Would she have preferred not to have spent so much of her life at public events? "Not really," she says promptly. "When I see how the friends of my childhood turned out, I left them in Brooklyn and they are still in Brooklyn."

The Weisgals have three children:

Mendy who is Michael Wager;

David Weisgal, an executive of the American Jewish Committee; and a daughter, Helen Amir, who lives in Israel with her agronomist husband Shlomo and their four sons.

Slight thaw in Russia

IT may still be many years before we fully understand the reasons behind the Soviet switch from refusal to allow any Jews to leave Russia and go to Israel, to the present policy — if it is indeed their considered policy — to allow 300,000 Jews to emigrate over the next ten years.

The Soviet-watchers were accustomed to tell us that a country that has proclaimed itself Paradise on earth could not afford to allow a considerable number of citizens to declare they would rather live elsewhere, and perhaps cause others to wonder whether the rest of the world was so unattractive. Also, that permission for Jews to go to Israel would be seen as an affront to their Arab friends. The first issue has been explained away, up to a point, by the Soviet method of declaring the Jews hostile and disloyal for wishing to go to Israel while the friendship with the Arabs has waned somewhat.

It has proved, in fact, that the Russians are solely concerned with their own current interests. Their wish for a détente with the U.S. and the ability to buy large quantities of food grains there has absolute priority at the moment. Senator Jackson's amendment, denying Russia most-favoured nation status unless they allow Jews to emigrate freely, has as a result been amazingly effective.

One can only speculate why they should offer to permit a comparatively small number of persons to emigrate annually over as long a period as ten years, rather than letting people go when they wish. They should not expect that many will postpone and perhaps abandon their departure if they are assured they will be able to go later. It would take much time for confidence in such a Soviet promise to build up, more particularly when some Jews seeking to emigrate continue to be harassed, imprisoned, from work and even imprisoned.

And why should the Jews from Moscow and central areas not be permitted to go? It has been more difficult throughout for persons resident in Moscow to obtain visas, apparently because emigration was felt to be harmful to the prestige of the capital.

Nevertheless we should look on even this grudging emigration agreement not only as a bargain made with the U.S., but as something in the nature of an olive branch hesitatingly held out to Israel. Persecution of Jews remains, and the agreement itself is uncertain and inadequate, but the arrival of large numbers of Soviet Jews has, despite everything, tended to re-awaken something of the links with Eastern Europe that existed formerly. It is not only that the newcomers have demonstrated to us that the Soviet Union is far less backward than we were inclined to assume in the years without contact, but that they retain a bond with the Soviet background, language and culture.

It is reasonable to assume that the Russians are also aware of this aspect of the emigration question, and that they may themselves today be considering the renewal of other contacts with Israel, particularly in the wake of the renewal of Western relations with the Arab states.

U.S. arms for Arabs

Davar (Eilat) writes on the supply of Phantom planes by the U.S. to Saudi Arabia: "This grave development will oblige the Israeli government to reassess its views regarding security borders, since Phantom planes in Arab hands will reduce to a dangerous level the deterrent range of Israel's eastern border. To date, this border had appeared sufficiently deterring to enable consideration of territorial set-lements despite the security risks, but the supply of Phantoms alters this concept."

Ha'aretz (non-party) writes: "Although the arms deals have an effect on the Middle East balance of forces, Israel would do well to understand the American motives. Washington is concerned at the Iraqi-Soviet threat hovering over the Persian Gulf oil wells, and her wish to strengthen two of the oil-producing countries — Saudi Arabia and Kuwait — is thus logical."

Al Hamishmar (Mappam) writes: "The flow of arms to Saudi Arabia may induce a dangerous euphoria among the Arab leaders, and importance thus attaches to Israel's response to President Boughe's offer to meet with an Israeli representative. This response is important also because of the allegations of Israeli responsibility for the deadlock."

THE 'COD WAR' ESCALATES

By DAVID LENNON
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

LONDON. — NATO and the U.N. Security Council, Presidents Nixon and Pompidou are all getting embroiled in a dispute about fish — the British-Icelandic "cod war."

This involvement has been brought about by the intransigence of the two sides to the dispute. Britain is adamant that it has a right to catch as many fish as it likes in the "freedom of the high seas," even a thousand kilometres off the British coast. Iceland is no less certain that it is justified in insisting that boats fishing up to 80 kilometres from its shore must curtail their catches.

Five rounds of negotiations over the past 14 months failed to produce any positive progress. In the middle of the negotiations, when it already appeared clear that this progress could be made, Iceland unilaterally extended its fishing limits from 20 to 80 kilometres off shore.

When negotiations failed and the British trawlers continued to fish inside the new limits, Iceland sent its tiny fleet of six gunboats, three of them converted whalers, to harass and chase the British trawlers away.

Phoney war

Britain's response was to send in three fast tug boats to protect its fishermen. When this proved less than adequate, the fishermen quit Icelandic waters, refusing to return until the Royal Navy was sent in alongside them. This was done and the phoney war escalated.

Iceland responded by banning Royal Air Force planes from using the Nato/American airbase at Keflavik. It also appealed to the Nato Council to intervene. Topping this both sides complained to the U.N. Security Council. Now that Mr. Nixon and Mr. Pompidou have visited the island, they too will no doubt be asked to put their oar in.

This is not the first time Britain and Iceland went to war over the right to fish cod. The last cod war began in September 1968 and an agreement was not finally reached until February 1961. Then too the British used their navy for two long years. In the end Iceland won the right to maintain a 20-km. rather than a 3 km. fishing limit. But the British retained the right to fish in the rich waters on the rest of Iceland's continental shelf.

The basic issue in dispute is very simple — over fishing. For years modern trawlers, West German and Russian as well as British, have been scooping up cod and other fish at a rate that threatens drastically to reduce the breeding population and ultimately destroy the fisheries.

Iceland wants to prevent this and to keep the industry going indefinitely by restricting the total catch in its waters to a level that enables the fish to reproduce themselves.

That is why it introduced the 80-km. limit, and it is hardly surprising that this tiny nation of 200,000 people should be prepared to fight. Fish form 80 per cent of its exports and fish are literally Iceland's only natural resource. Without it they would be in deep trouble.

Overfishing

Britain's defence of its continued unregulated overfishing in the vital cod breeding grounds is that it has every legal right to fish the high seas. Further, it claims that Iceland has no right to jurisdiction over 80 km. of sea. At the same time the British had no compunction about claiming jurisdiction over the sea bed up to a couple of hundred kms. of its shore when it was realized that there was oil and gas in the North Sea.

Icelandic fishermen admire a fine specimen.

Indeed, the whole business of territorial waters has never yet been satisfactorily settled by any international conference. A U.N. conference of 86 nations at Geneva in 1958 sought to codify the Law of the High Seas but failed completely in deciding the maximum permissible breadth of territorial sea subject to national sovereignty.

About the only general agreement under international law concerns the minimum width of 3 kms. which every state is entitled to claim.

Egypt, Greece, Italy and Spain, among others, claim a 10 kms. limit. Russia claims 20 kms. There is a bill currently in the Iranian Parliament to give Iran the right to stop and inspect ships within 80 kms. of the Gulf coast which are suspected of causing oil pollution. Peru and Chile taken action to assert jurisdiction waters as well as continental shelf waters in some cases to over 180 kms. off shore.

It would seem therefore that Britain no more "legal" right to fish inside 80 kms. limit than has Iceland to its sovereignty. Last year the U.N. decided states have permanent sovereignty both sea bed and super-adjacent waters. An International Law of the Sea Conference is to be held late in 1974 and perhaps the whole matter can be resolved, though many doubt it.

In the meantime it would not seem reasonable to state that Iceland does a right to economic survival, and difficult to see how this small country could survive economically were the fishing industry to collapse.

Medical negligence

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — I have just witnessed a very cruelly resulting from administrative negligence. A patient in the Hadassah Dermatology ward suffered a sudden kidney attack. She called for a doctor at 12:30 p.m. screaming in agony. She was allowed to writhe in pain for two and a half hours before a doctor arrived. The nurses apologetically claimed that, because the hospital is severely understaffed on the Sabbath, such cases were not the exception to the rule.

As Israel rejoices in its achievements of 25 years, it must very seriously reflect on such treatment in one of its major hospitals.

STEPHEN BENNER
Jerusalem, May 6.
The Hadassah Medical Organisation replies:

Our enquiry shows that the nurse in the Dermatology Department sent out a call immediately for the doctor on duty. He was at the time treating other urgent cases in the Emergency Department and came to the Dermatology Department as soon as he was free to do so.

Hadassah doctors in the various branches of medicine and surgery are on duty at the hospital 24 hours a day (including Sabbaths and official holidays) and, in addition, senior specialists are available "on call" for urgent consultations, as needed.

We can understand Mr. Benner's anxiety for the patient's welfare, but we can assure him that our dedicated medical, nursing and administrative staff are no less concerned and do their utmost at all times to alleviate suffering.

Cruelty to animals

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, I have recently read in some back copies of your newspaper of the conditions under which animals are housed and treated at the Bar Ilan University. Furthermore, some pamphlets issued by the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in Israel have come into my possession and I am frankly astounded that, in a highly sophisticated society, such apparent ties should exist.

I sincerely trust that your newspaper, pressures exerted upon those responsible for animals required for research in a humane and dignified fashion.
